Horror of Worst Air Tragedy Told

PORT DEPOSIT, Md., May 31 (AP)—Investigators today pieced together the burned and broken bodies strewn along a wooded hillside last night when a four-engine airliner suddenly plunged from 1000 feet and killed all 53 aboard. It was the worst disaster in the history of U. S. commercial aviation. Forty-nine passengers, one of them a babe in its mother's arms, and four crew members were aboard the Eastern Airlines DC-4 on a non-stop flight from Newark, N. J., to Miami, Fla. Three eyewitnesses said the giant plane exploded in the air. Two said it turned on its back and dived to the ground.

Searchers today collected all but one of the mutilated bodies and removed them over improvised trails to the nearby Bainbridge Naval Training Center.

Comdr. J. S. Schmidt, duty officer at Bainbridge, said attempts to identify the dead would begin at 10 a. m. today, though the local medical examiner said that they were all burned or mutilated beyond recognition.

The crash in the Maryland hills climaxed 48 hours of air disaster around the world.

Only the night before a United Airlines Mainliner was wrecked at New York with the loss of 40 lives. For 24 hours that wreck was rated the worst commercial air catastrophe the United States had known.

The airliner that crashed here came in low over the hills about 6:30 p. m. Winged over and plummeted into a forest a short distance from the Susquehanna river.

"It went right smack into the woods," reported J. G. Higgins of Baltimore who was driving along a nearby highway. "Then there was a terrific sheet of flame, followed by a thick cloud of black smoke. Then there was a wisp of white smoke."

The catastrophe was witnessed from the air by two Civil Aeronautics Board officials who today were among those investigating the cause—as yet unknown.

The CAB said it probably was the first time that a major airline crash has been witnessed by men who regulate the safety of air operations.

Col. Beverly Ober, superintendent of Maryland police said:

"That was the worst scene I have ever witnessed as a police officer."

The bodies of three children were found in the wreckage.

Early arrivals at the scene, many of them momentarily overcome by the sight of dismembered bodies, crumpled segments of plane, and clothing strewn pitifully from tree branches, said the debris was scattered for hundreds of yards.

Piloting the DC-4, which left Newark at 4:55 p. m. and was last reported by the Philadelphia control tower at 5:27 p. m., was 40-year-old William E. Coney of Miami, who during the war was commander of the Navy's famous Mars Flying Boat.

A body believed to that of Capt. Coney, was found clutching a piece of metal which State Troopers said probably was the throttle handle.

Rescuers told of finding the mutilated body of a woman clutching the body of a baby. They were identified by Michael Rosenberg of Newark as his sister, Mrs. Edward Stuart of Miami, and her year-old son, Michael.

George McMillen, a farmer, said he was watching the plane when he saw a flash of light.

"Pieces of the thing flew up into the sky like turkey buzzards taking to the air," said McMillen.

The CAB officials who witnessed the crash saw the ship "nose down in a very steep angle and go into the ground some three to five miles in front of them."

Kin Seek to Identify 40 Killed in N. Y. Crash

NEW YORK, May 31 (AP)—Relatives and friends sought today to complete identification of 40 persons killed in the holiday week-end crash of a DC-4 airliner near La Guardia Field, which United Air Lines said probably was caused by a freak gust of wind "of almost unbelievable suddenness."

The other eight persons on the plane, which crashed and burned before a takeoff from Cleveland Thursday night, remained in hospitals, five of them in critical condition.

The United Air Lines said that the pilot had tried to halt the plane when it failed to lift.

A preliminary civil aeronautics board report also said the pilot attempted to stop the plane, whose crash was the nation's worst commercial airline disaster until last night's crash in Maryland which took 53 lives.

"It is believed," the company said, "that a freak gust of wind slightly in advance of the approaching squall-line was responsible for the accident. To our

Crash Victim Perpetrator Of 'Suicide' to Regain Wife

STAMFORD, Ct., May 31 (INS)—Abraham Kohn, 46-year-old Stamford resident who died in the Maryland plane disaster, was identified today as the principal in a bizarre suicide hoax through which he had hoped to win a reconciliation with his wife.

Kohn took his four children and a Chinese ward for a ride in a hired boat last August. The rowboat was found later, with the clothes of all stacked neatly on the bottom, and authorities at first feared all were drowned.

On Aug. 26, Kohn and the children were found at Milford, Pa., and it was then that he explained the suicide hoax was an attempt to win a reconciliation with his wife.

Also killed in last night's crash was Kohn's son, Samuel, 12, and Tom Lum, a Chinese chef from New York City. Kohn and the chef were en route to Miami where the Chinese was to do the cooking in a restaurant which they planned to open.

9 Plane Crashes Take 174 Lives

By The Associated Press

The two worst disasters in the nation's commercial aviation history killed 93 persons within 24 hours and four other plane crashes around the globe—in Japan, Iceland, The Netherlands and Alaska—boosted the total number of dead to at least 174. Three persons were missing and 30 suffered injuries in the six plane mishaps.

The most disastrous of the crashes occurred yesterday—Memorial Day—near Port Deposit, Md., when an Eastern Air Lines DC-4 transport cracked up, killing all 53 persons aboard—49 passengers and four crew members.

Less than 24 hours before the Memorial Day crash in Maryland, 40 persons lost their lives when another DC-4, a United Airlines transport, crash-landed at New York's LaGuardia Field.

In other plane mishaps around the world on Thursday:

Forty were killed in Japan; 25 in Iceland; 12 in The Netherlands; 4 in the Argentine, and three were missing in Alaska.

The series of plane crashes in the last two days increased to 424 the total number of persons killed in the world since Jan. 1 in 16 major commercial and military carcracks.

Yesterday's crash at Port Deposit took the same toll as the crash of a Colombian Avianes Airlines near Bogota, Colombia, last Feb. 13.

The bodies of 25 persons were found by searchers in the wreckage of an Icelandic Airways DC-3 plane which smashed up on a rocky mountainside Thursday. There were 10 women and four children among the passengers, all Icelanders and Norwegians.

The crackup of a C-54 Army courier plane southwest of Tokyo cost the lives of 28 enlisted men, eight officers and four civilians. 428 the total number of persons. The bodies of all 34 of the victims have been recovered though it was reported all were burned beyond recognition.

Three members of a crew of a B-29 which crashed shortly after a takeoff at Fairbanks, Ala., still were reported missing today. Nine other crew members who survived suffered injuries.

Four civilians suffered severe burns at Lichfield, Eng., yesterday when a Royal Air Force Liberator bomber parked on an airport runway blew up. The plane was destroyed by the explosion, the cause of which was not determined.

Four persons were killed and another gravely injured in three plane crashes in the Argentine in the last three days.

Two Army aviators were killed Thursday when their training plane struck a tree near Mendoza. The same day a man and a woman lost their lives when the plane in which they were riding caught fire and crashed. The third occupant was seriously injured. A third plane crashed near Cordoba Province, but the pilot managed to bail out before the ship crashed.

Owe Goodale 3 Mos. Pay on Time in Jail

ONSET, May 31—The State owes Charles Russell Goodale three months' pay for the time he spent in jail awaiting his trial and acquittal on a charge of murdering Ruth McGurk of Cambridge. As the 26-year-old naval veteran made plans today for a fresh start in life, it was learned that under the law he is entitled to that much compensation for the nine months he spent in jail from the time he was indicted last Aug. 30 to the moment of his acquittal early yesterday.

There had been considerable speculation about whether or not he was entitled to any compensation. Sen. Charles G. Miles of Brockton stated he would confer with legislators on a proposal to reimburse persons acquitted on murder charges with $50 for each day spent in jail.

But three months pay is clearly assured to the youth under the General Laws, Section 73, Chapter 277, which reads, in part:

"Any person in the Commonwealth kept in confinement awaiting trial for more than six months after having been indicted, and finally acquitted . . . if the delay in trial was not at his request or with his consent . . . may receive compensation for the period of his confinement after the lapse of the said six months and until his acquittal; provided that the payment of compensation is approved by the justice who presided at the trial.

"Such compensation shall be paid by the county where the indictment was found and shall be equivalent to the amount the indicted person earned or received from his regular employment for any period of equal length during the two years preceding his confinement.

"If he had no employment, the compensation shall be such reasonable sum as shall be determined by the justice who presided at the trial. The justice, upon application by the person acquitted, shall give a hearing at which such person or his representatives may be present, and the district attorney or other officers representing the Commonwealth or county. The person acquitted and the Commonwealth may offer testimony as in any civil case. The decision of the justice shall be final."

Prior to his indictment, Goodale had been employed part-time in cranberry bogs near his home after his discharge from the Navy in December, 1945.

The delay in his trial was not at Goodale's request and, through Atty. Matthew King, he made several efforts to obtain a speedy trial.

Today the Goodales, parents and son, left their new home in Buzzards Bay early and departed by auto for an unannounced destination.

Mrs. Rose Thurrell, of Ninth ave., Onset, a close friend of Mrs. Goodale, said they had stopped at her home to "say goodbye for a few days." They told her they were going to visit the youth's paternal grandmother in Maine. Mrs. Goodale had said yesterday she hoped the family would take a brief vacation. The Goodales had eaten a holiday dinner at the Thurrell home yesterday in their first meal together since last August.

In his first day of freedom yesterday, Goodale found privacy in the afternoon in a long auto ride with his father and mother.

While he appeared happy and even jubilant, his conversation with reporters reflected a desire to travel to a distant state.

"You may see me in California pretty soon," he commented tersely.

He also said earlier that he'd telephone soon to the girl in Minnesota who was described as his fiancée during court testimony.

If "Russ" goes to California as hinted, it will possibly be in company with James Rose, the New Bedford artist who is a close friend, and with whom Goodale previously planned a partnership in the commercial art business.

His faithful mother expressed gratitude to acquaintances and even strangers who were "more than kind to us."

"I really felt that God would answer my constant prayers to have my boy back and found innocent. From the first days after this happened to us, I prayed constantly for such a day as this to come. I knew it would. It was that faith, more than anything else, which made it possible to keep going through these months," she said quietly.

Meanwhile, the family of Ruth McGurk remained in seclusion at their third-floor apartment in Columbia st., Cambridge. Friends said Mrs. Helen McGurk spends much time sitting in sorrowful contemplation of a photograph of her murdered daughter.

CHARLES RUSSELL GOODALE, MRS. CLARENCE GOODALE

Time of Essence In McGurk Verdict

By ALAN FRAZER

"O, grave, where is thy victory?" Here!

At the edge of the grave of Ruth McGurk in Cambridge Cemetery, the law stands baffled.

Half a million words were uttered by the lawyers and witnesses in the Plymouth courtroom where Charles Russell Goodale was found not guilty. Some 20,000 questions were asked and answered.

But when the lights went out and the lawyers went home, and the crowd that had waited through half the mild spring night for the verdict dispersed, and the roar of motors, a young woman asked a question that none had answered:

"Who killed Ruth McGurk?" Somewhere among the 700 dancers who fox-trotted in the Onset Casino on another balmy night was her killer. Somewhere he goes about his work and play today. Somewhere he alone carries the answer in his heart.

As the lawyers said, there were "no tracks in the snow" in this case. There was circumstantial evidence only. And the missing circumstantial evidence that existed somewhere, too minute to be discovered—even that has been obliterated by time.

Time. In the final analysis, in the final argument in the jury room, where the jurors could be seen in their shirt-sleeves, cigars in their mouths, thrashing out the last detail, time cleared the name of Russell Goodale.

After the judge had been asked for a review of the testimony regarding the time element on the fateful night, the jurors capitulated to the not-guilty finding all but one, and at last he gave in.

Time had played as dire a part in the murder of Ruth McGurk as it ever has played in any of the tragedies of history. It took the state nine months to bring Goodale to trial and find him innocent. But Ruth McGurk went to her death with a swiftness that was in the end to thwart all the skilled forces of the law.

She arrived at Onset shortly before noon, Saturday, July 27, and was dead before 1 a. m. Sunday.

She arrived at the dance hall around 9:30 and was dead in less than four hours.

She started to dance with her killer about 9:40, and he was forever out of sight of her chums in 30 seconds.

She accepted an invitation to go out at 10 o'clock, spoke 14 words to her chums, but failed to take the minute that would have been necessary to introduce her partner—the "man named Frank."

She was sought beginning Sunday noon, July 28. But 24 hours elapsed before Police Chief Tremaine Smith of the adjoining town of Carver heard of her disappearance, and then only casually, because his headquarters is not equipped with teletype.

She lay in the water of Makepeace reservoir in Carver for four days.

Time decomposed her body so that even the cause of death was problematical.

Then time entered the lists to the apparent detriment of Russell Goodale—in the eyes of the state.

He left the dance hall around 10 p. m.

He arrived at Tiny Jim's and spent about five minutes there looking for an empty booth.

He went to the King Midas and left there no later than 11:15, the state said.

He arrived home at 1:30, according to the state.

And finally time cleared the accused.

He convinced the jury he stopped to park between Tiny Jim's and the King Midas.

He convinced the jury he arrived at the King Midas at 11:30.

He convinced the jury he did not leave until about 10 minutes of 12.

His mother convinced the jury he got home shortly after midnight.

And time played its last trump as the law bowed its head and said it could not say at what hour, except that it was between 10 p. m. and 1 a. m., Ruth McGurk passed over the boundary of time into the eternal.

At that hour—whenever it was—the answer was given to the question asked by St. Paul

"O, grave, where is thy victory?" Here!

Hedy Parts From Mate John Loder

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, May 31—Hedy Lamarr and John Loder have separated.

He returned here Thursday after two months' absence and went to the home of a friend.

Saturday is the birthday of one of their children, and he will be with Hedy then, but only for the celebration.

Today Hedy said:

"I have signed no divorce papers. I have done my best to work this out. There are so many things to take into consideration. When I had my baby, John only came to see me at night and then only stayed about five minutes. He seems to take no responsibility for the children.

"We have talked over a separation, and I can't deny that I have thought about a divorce. Hedy's attorney, A. Ronald But- ton, said his client had not made any definite decision.

John, who is living with a friend by the name of Philip, refused to discuss his marital differences. He left his show in New York to come out here to see if he could straighten things out. He and Hedy separated once before, then went back and lived together.

They have three children, Denise, two years old, a baby, Anthony John, three months, an adopted child, James Markey, eight.

This is the third marriage for each. Hedy was married to Fritz Mandel, fabulously wealthy munitions king, from whom she was divorced, and later to Gene Markey.

John was married to an English woman by whom he has a grown son, now married, and his second wife was Micheline Cheirel, a French actress.

One never knows in these Hollywood marriages what will happen, but this looks like the most serious difference the Loders have ever had.

Hungary Changes Cabinet As Reds Hit at President

BUDAPEST, May 31 (AP)—The Hungarian Cabinet announced today that Lajos Dinnyes, 46-year-old minister of war, had been chosen Premier to succeed Ferenc Nagy, who resigned two days ago while on vacation in Switzerland. The Cabinet also announced that Istvan Kertesz, recently named minister to Rome, had been appointed to replace Foreign Minister János Gyöngyösi, whose pro-western views have been opposed by left-wing parties.

It said that new national elections would be held in September. Reports circulated meanwhile, that the Communists having forced Nagy from office, and

BULLETIN

BUDAPEST, Hungary, May 31 (AP)—A high Hungarian official, nervous and frightened after events of the past three days, said tonight the Communist party was now "in 100 per cent control" and soon would accept a Russian offer to train and fully equip the Hungarian army.

turned the pressure on President Zoltan Tildy in continuation of what some informants said was a determined drive to turn Hungary into a police state.

Appointment of Dinnyes to the premiership surprised parliamentary circles. Persons close to Cabinet members said that up to this morning Imre Oltványi, former president of the national bank, had been the Communist choice for the post and therefore the most likely candidate.

The informants said Oltványi had been turned down at the last minute in a message from the Russians, who have occupation troops in Hungary. They declared that it was too early to learn the real reason for the Russian veto, but first reports in Parliament were that it was because Oltványi was of Swab (German) origin and had served in the intelligence section of the Hungarian army which fought the Russians.

Britain Views Coup As Communist Plot

LONDON, May 31 (AP)—A Foreign Office spokesman said today the British government views the recent events in Hungary as a new step by the Communists to seize power.

He said the Foreign Office had received a preliminary report from A. K. Helm, British political representative in Budapest, on the events leading to the resignation of Premier Ferenc Nagy, replaced by Lajos Dinnyes, 4-year-old minister of war.

The spokesman declined comment when asked whether Britain would recognize a Communist regime in Hungary, but said the matter was under consideration.

H. E. Davis, general manager of the banking firm of N. M. Rothschild and Sons, said that "so far as he knows the reported Communist coup had brought no change in a plan for a 500,000-pound ($2,000,000) credit to the Hungarian National Bank.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported from Budapest that the Hungarian cabinet had decided to establish state controls over the nation's 13 largest banks.

High School Crusaders Set For Hub Visit

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE

WASHINGTON, May 31—Three suddenly famous high school students made final plans for their tour of six cities in a crusade for Americanism. They are two girls and a boy who won nationwide acclaim when they walked out of Western High School here in protest against a Communist-inspired lecture on "Russian Education."

They are Virginia Marakle, daughter of Mrs. A. V. Holmes; Ruthe Pigott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Pigott; Richard Smith, son of Col. and Mrs. Junius Smith.

From the list of invitations to visit and talk to high school groups in every important city in the United States they have been able to accept only six.

The Hearst newspapers are sponsoring their tour and have arranged the following itinerary:

Pittsburgh, June 2; Chicago, June 3; Milwaukee, June 4; Detroit, June 5-6; Boston, June 7-8-9; Albany, June 10, returning to Washington, June 11.

Programs designed to get the message of the crusading students to the greatest number of high school students and their parents have been carefully worked out by officials in each city they will visit.

They believe the people who have invited them to talk are interested most in two developments:

One is the incident which made them the first high school students in the United States to assert themselves openly in opposition to the spread of foreign doctrines in the schools.

The other is the extent to which Red organizations have infiltrated the nation's school system and some idea of the national peril from it.

Sneeze Betrays Youths in Break

A muffled sneeze issuing from behind the counter of the Johnson Service Station in Centre st., West Roxbury, led to the capture of two youths by police early today.

Patrolmen John B. Feeney and Herbert Duxbury found a smashed window in the rear door of the station and as they went inside they heard a barely audible sneeze. Store lights were flashed on by the officers and two 16-year-old neighborhood youths emerged from behind the counter.

No Reds or Socialists in New Italian Cabinet

ROME, May 31 (AP)—Premier-Designate Alcide De Gasperi announced today the membership of his fourth cabinet—the first since the liberation to contain no Communists or Socialists. It is composed of five Independents and 11 members of De Gasperi's moderate Christian Democratic party. Carlo Sforza, 63-year-old diplomat-author and also an Independent, was reappointed foreign minister.

Britons Blossom Out Colors Take Over Styles

LONDON, May 31 (AP)—No, Junior, your eyes are not deceiving you. That is a pink hat which the man is wearing down Piccadilly. Yes, that other one is cream, and the one coming out of Bond st. really is blue.

Nobody ever thought it would happen, but the English male is coming out of his cocoon of conservatism, as far as clothes are concerned, and he is finally something gorgeous to behold. Look at that yellow necktie with the brown dots, Junior. Cool!

It's not only on Charing Cross rd., which has a raffish Broadway atmosphere, that the black Anthony Eden hat and the dark suit are giving ground to the colors of the rainbow. Pale pastel shades are even creeping out of the snootier Mayfair shops.

"I suppose it's a reaction against the drabness of London life generally," said a Bond st. haberdasher, who admitted a little shamefacedly, he had laid in a stock of apple green fedoras and was actually selling some of them. This man's slant on the new peacock hue?

"Our food is monotonous, our furniture is shabby, our houses need painting and our old clothes—that's the only kind most of us have—look as though they had been to a generation of funerals. 'Well, when a man buys a hat or a necktie he has a chance to break through this curtain of drabness, and rather a lot of men—especially the younger men—are taking advantage of it."

Even in buying a suit, which takes most of his annual allotment of ration coupons, many a man is casting tradition to the winds. One tailor who caters to young bloods reported:

"Success of the season is the diagonal weave in grays, fawns and browns, with patch pockets and the draped shape to give a fuller chest."

Little of this sartorial brilliance has penetrated London's financial district, where the bowler (derby) hat and the tightly rolled black umbrella remain the hallmarks of respectability. But a stock broker did turn up in a yellow waistcoat the other day. He said it lost him two customers.

Legion Honors Phoebe Hearst

Special to Boston Evening American

SAN FRANCISCO, May 31—In Memorial Day rites impressive in their simplicity, tribute was paid again today to the memory of Phoebe Apperson Hearst as a wreath was laid upon her Cypress Lawn tomb.

American legionnaires took part in the ceremony, held at the request of the Phoebe Apperson Hearst Memorial Post 1197 of New York City, and Fred Coulman, first commander of the San Francisco county council of the legion.

Arrangements for the program in San Francisco were directed by Ed Sharkey, National Vice Commander of the Legion.

BRITISH BOARD JEWISH SHIP
JERUSALEM, May 31 (AP)—British sailors boarded the "Yehuda Halevy," carrying an estimated 500 visaless Jews to Palestine off Haifa and are escorting the vessel to that port for transshipment of the immigrants to Cyprus detention camps.

General Court of the Commonwealth, Mayor Curley said today. "I shall appear at Tuesday's morning hearing on this measure by the legislative committee on taxation and urge immediate action on this most beneficial matter," the Mayor said.

"It is imperative that leaders in the fields of business and industry be in attendance and that every civic and commercial organization send representatives to this hearing."

"The future welfare of the Commonwealth may depend to considerable extent upon what is done by the public in impressing upon the Legislature the need for immediate action on this bill."

Judge John J. Burns, former superior court justice, has already announced his intention to attend the Tuesday session and explain in detail the many advantages to be gained by Massachusetts citizens by enactment of this law this year.

This plan, embodied in a bill introduced by Reps. Peter Jordan (R.) of Revere, and David Cleary (D.) of Boston, would evenly divide all income between a man and wife, and make all property acquired after marriage community property.

The immediate purpose of the bill is to effect a saving in the income tax paid the federal government. Proponents of the measure point out that savings of from 23 to 42 per cent would result if a man and his wife filed separate tax returns, each for half their total income for the year. California and nine other states have such a law.

It is estimated that Massachusetts taxpayers would save a minimum of $32,000,000 a year, while some tax experts reckon savings at twice that sum.

Passage of a community property law would likewise present the Commonwealth, now hard pressed for money to maintain state services, an opportunity of raising it without resorting to the unpopular sales tax.

The bill's proponents feel that if citizens were able to save from 23 to 42 per cent in their federal taxes, they would not object to a small increase in state income tax rates.

They point out that the exemptions might be raised, and that the increased rates in the higher brackets would bring in sufficient revenue to solve the state's financial problems.

Beulah Beat Mother To Death, State Says

SANTA ANA, Cal., May 31 (INS)—The State revealed it would name Beulah Louise Overell as the murderer of her mother, Mrs. Beulah Overell.

The disclosure was made by Eugene D. Williams, special prosecutor appointed after Dist. Atty. James L. Davis was removed from office.

Williams said in the outline of the State's case to the jury he would accuse the 18-year-old heir, of an "overt act of murder." The prosecutor then went on to disclose for the first time that it is the State's contention Miss Overell beat her mother to death while her sweetheart co-defendant, George R. Gollum, killed her later, financier Walter E. Overell.

The prosecution intends to charge Mrs. Overell was attacked while she was asleep in the forward part of the yacht Mary E. in Newport bay last March 15, and died of a blow on the head.

The attack is alleged to have taken place while Mr. Overell was asleep. It is the prosecution's contention that when he returned to the boat he was set upon and slain to death, with Gollum as his assailant.

A report that Miss Overell's uncle, Fred and Emanuel Jungquist, would testify against her was emphatically denied by the girl's attorney, Otto A. Jacobs.

The attorney called the uncle into conference with the young defendants to map a campaign against what he termed "false public opinion."

The trial started last Monday and now is in recess until next Monday.

From two offices, a gas station and a settlement house thieves operating in Roxbury and the South End today garnered $1200 in cash, $2 in war stamps, a revolver, an adding machine, a check protector and a batch of checks.

Employees of the Clear Weaver Hosiery Store, Washington st., Roxbury, reported $1000 in cash and a number of checks taken from a safe opened by cracksmen.

The check protector and the adding machine, both valued at $850, were stolen from the office of the Downes Lumber Co. South Bay ave., Roxbury.

A window was smashed to get into the Dennison House, Howard ave., Roxbury, where $200 in cash and $2 in war stamps were taken.

Sunny Skies Due For Week-End

An ideal week-end with sunny skies and moderate westerly winds was predicted by the weather bureau today.

Sunday was expected to be as fair as today but warmer. Temperatures were not scheduled to rise above the 60's this afternoon along the coast but will drop to 52 in Greater Boston during the night and as low as 48 inland.

At Portland the mercury dipped to 36, a new record there for the date, smashing a mark of 39 which had stood since 1884. In Rumford, Me., it hit 32, the freezing mark.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 31 (AP)—The Canadian Air Force's air-sea rescue unit reported today that the 7176-ton American vessel Edward E. Spafford of Portland, Me., lost her rudder about 1200 miles east of here. The British freighter Northern Traveller was en route to the crippled ship.

U. S. Snarls Belgian Girl's Wedding Plans

A blonde, gray-eyed Belgian girl today started her life in America by placing herself exactly where she wanted to be—in the arms of the soldier who had waited for her for 10 months.

But little more than a kiss later, Louise C. Wilms of Antwerp was out of the embrace of former Lt. Joseph Flack, 36, Pittsburgh, Pa., and in the hands of immigration officials.

On the dock in East Boston where the Midland Victory tied up after a 10-day crossing from Europe, sympathetic officials said there was a little matter of a $500 bond Flack had forgotten to post.

The veteran didn't even bother looking through his pockets. He just didn't have that much money with him.

Out like the tide went his dreams of a wedding tonight. Back to the ship went Louise.

Flack stole one more kiss, then sped to South Station for a train to New York where the Midland Victory would dock tomorrow. He'd be waiting there with $500, he said wryly, and they'd be married Monday.

"I thought my troubles were over when I saw the ship pull in with Louise waving to me from the deck, but I guess there's no end to red tape," he said. He'd been enmeshed in the stuff since last July when he himself returned from the ETO and started negotiations to bring his bride here.

Louise was less ruffled than her sweetheart. She told him another few days of separation didn't mean a thing after 10 months.

Flack met Louise while he was stationed in Antwerp for six months after action in Holland, Belgium, France and Germany with the 774th Field Artillery. In those months he taught her English and they fell in love.

knowledge, this has never before caused a fatal accident to a plane of this type or, in fact, to any large transport plane."

The preliminary report by a Civil Aeronautics Board official said notice of "approaching wind shifts" had been given the pilot.

The airline statement, however, said the wind shift apparently hit the plane before reaching the airport control tower.

The 40 dead included 38 passengers and two crew members. Extraordinary emotional control was exhibited by relatives and friends as they identified the dead at the morgue of Queens General Hospital in Jamaica.

Witnesses said only two of some 100 who passed through the morgue burst into uncontrollable tears.

Jewelry and other personal items were assembled with data to aid in identification of bodies. Otherwise, the task would have been virtually impossible because most of the bodies were burned beyond recognition.

Smart Set Cole Engagement

By BETTY ALDEN

"SAILING, SAILING" MIGHT WELL BE called the theme song of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Meyer of Greenwich, Ct., and Plymouth, Mass. They have just returned from crossing the Pacific to visit their married daughter in Honolulu and this week-end they are sailing in their own boat from Plymouth to the North Shore for a very special party.

The party is to celebrate the engagement of Eleanor Cole, pretty post-bell daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin E. Cole of Wrentham, to John H. B. Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Meyer's son.

Eleanor is a debut in 1943 and is a member of the Vincent Club. Her sisters are Mrs. Thomas B. Gannett of Wayland, Mrs. Herbert Sears Tuckerman of Beverly and Mrs. Paul Fox of Suffield, Ct. John graduated from Milton Academy and Yale in 1942. He served with the Army overseas and is now a student at Harvard Business School. He is a brother of Mrs. Frederick Louis of Honolulu, Robert and Alfred Meyer, Jr., of Plymouth, who with their wives are also sailing to the North Shore for the engagement festivities.

THERE WERE JUMPS and thrills aplenty for horse lovers who flocked to the opening of the colorful Dedham Horse Show yesterday on the grounds of the Dedham Country and Polo Club. The show continues today.

Last evening the judges and out-of-town guests were entertained at a horse show ball at the club. One of the largest parties of young people was the Dedham dinner arranged by Darby Army and preceded by a cocktail party given by Jessie Richmond at her parents' beautiful estate bordering the Charles river.

Among the 20 or more couples in Darby's group were Jean Cochran and her fiancé, Charles Sumner Bird, 3d, who are to be married a week from today; Hope Noyes and Philip Stewart, a June 14 bridal couple; Ann Clarke and Larry Morgan, another June 7 bridal couple; Mr. and Mrs. Roswell Perkins, Elizabeth Cabot, Henry Minot, Mr. and Mrs. J. Carter Jones (Grace Reed), who came over from New York for the holiday; Mr. and Mrs. Morgan H. Plummer, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William B. Rogers, 3d, and Mr. and Mrs. David Devens (Lucy Aldrich).

Also in this merry group were Ray MacDuffie, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Whitney 3d, Robert Gardner, Richard Humphrey, Frederick Myers, James Gilman, William Curtis and Robert Storer. Another popular guest at the dinner dance was Miss Betty DuMaine of Groton, a house guest of the Robert B. Almys, who just returned from hunting in Ireland and skiing in Switzerland and has loads of interesting anecdotes about her travels abroad.

THE MARRIAGE of Margaret Peterson Thompson to Frank Richard Quinn took place yesterday afternoon at the Second Congregational Church, Cohasset. The bride is the daughter of Mr. Richard C. Thompson of Cohasset and Old Saybrook, Ct., and Mrs. Percy Wickford. The groom's home is in Marshfield Hills.

THE BOSTON UNIT, Women's Overseas Service League, will have a meeting Monday at the Brittany Coffee Shop to consider names for nomination of a national convention at Seattle in July. Delegates from the Boston unit will be Mrs. Russell Sheldon, Miss Irene Haworth, Ella Brigham, Ethel Greene and Ella Patterson. The league is having a night at the Pops June 12.

PRETTY FAIR GRAB

SHANGHAI, May 31 (AP)—Soft-hearted Chinese pirates robbed 300 passengers of a Yangtze River steamer today of 200,000,000 Chinese dollars (about $16,800) at Nantung, only 40 miles north of Shanghai.

A Chinese man, the heaviest loser, fainted when the pirates relieved him of 130,000,000 Chinese dollars. The pirates took pity on him and let him make a two-handed grab into their bag of loot. The victim came up with 200,000 dollars, which he was allowed to keep.

Met's 'Calcutta' Staring Contest

"Calcutta," the holiday week film fare for Met patrons, is pretty much of a staring contest between Alan Ladd at his most terse and Gail Russell being wide-eyed to a sometimes ludicrous degree.

Third star of this slow-motion whodunit is William Bendix, who makes more sense than anyone else in the laggard script.

Pretentiously packaged, "Calcutta" is a slight, unconvincing melodrama about murder and smuggling in the Far East. To give it atmosphere certain quaint customs of a Hindu sect have been introduced into the action. One of these is thuggee or strangling, a form of quiet murder, that early evases John Whitney from the picture.

This sequence and a later one that almost rubs out Ladd... thuggee again... provide the only excitement in this otherwise actionless "meller."

Ladd and Bendix, a couple of commercial pilots, fly the Hump from India to China, seek to avenge the murder of their pal, Whitney, through: most of the footage.

Miss Russell, who is supposed to have loved Whitney, proves to be deeper than her wide naive blue-eyed stare would indicate. The other feminine angle, June Duprez, is the golden-hearted nightclub singer to whom Ladd eventually returns.

Maybe she cared, but by that time this pass-holding member of the working press didn't. Deadpan Ladd and your film-reporter got zipped in this one. P. D.

'Ramrod,' Thrilling Western, On Para-Fenway Screens

By PEGGY DOYLE

A story of ugly, inhuman relationships filmed against a background of the West's beautiful desert and mesa country is presently unreeling impressive if somewhat sordid entertainment for Paramount and Fenway audiences.

"Ramrod," a Harry Sherman production, is Enterprise's first offering. On the basis of its intelligently scripted story, different treatment, nicely underplayed performances by a "name" cast and first-rate direction, this non-formula Western is definitely worth catching. But don't bring the children, please.

Joel McCrea plays the title role, a ramrod, for your information, being Western for foreman or bossman of the range. Veronica Lake, a fragile hellion, embarks on a feud with her father, Charlie Ruggles, and Preston Foster, who runs the cow country, when the two run her sheep rancher-fiance, Ian McDonald, out of town.

Their "sea of grass" angle is that it is for cows, not sheep. Miss Lake, who has been gilded by McDonald with his sheep ranch, would reverse them.

In pursuance of this program, she hires McCrea to be the foreman, or "ramrod" of her sheep ranch. He has a reputation as a troublesome uppper. Only Arlene Whelan, a fetching town seamstress, knows that his excessive drinking is induced by grief over the loss of his wife and child.

Veronica's mania for revenge... she persuades DeFore to fake a stampede to frame Foster... sets in motion a gunfighting range

Maurice Evans to Play in 'Man and Superman'

Maurice Evans plans for the presentation of Bernard Shaw's "Man and Superman" in the fall are taking shape. By special permission of the author, the third act will not be played. Mr. Evans will be seen in the part of John Tanner, M.I.R.C. Member of the Idle Rich Class and it will mark his first appearance in America in a contemporary comedy.

'High Barbaree' Heart-Warming

Heart-warming may possibly be the word for Metro's "High Barbaree," now tenting the State and Orpheum screens, but there is a superficial nobility and lack of credibility about it all that somehow fails to kindle this cold heart.

Doubtless this holdout vote will be a lone one for the presence of sunny-faced Van Johnson... he is co-starred with June Allyson... is a gilt-edged guarantee of any picture's healthy boxoffice.

Another persuasive factor in the picture's favor are the charming childhood squeezes involving two unidentified youngsters as the little boy and girl playmates who grow up to be Johnson and Miss Allyson.

Claude Jarman, Jr., whom you'll soon be hating in "The Yearling," is completely captivating as the boy grown older whose hair-raising bicycling as a substitute circus act sends you as well as his little friend Nancy's heart to the throat.

"High Barbaree" is presented in dependable flashback fashion in the interest of skirting the war-theme hazard. The story stems from a drifting Navy seaplane in the Pacific occupied by Johnson and a fellow pilot, Cameron Mitchell, and the memories the former voices of a happy childhood in a small Iowa town highlighted by his fabulous Uncle Thad.

The seafaring Uncle Thad, played with a warmth and imagination by Thomas Mitchell, used to tell of a wonderful uncharted island, High Barbaree. It is these flashback sequences, with their genuine emotional appeal and natural comedy that are the better part of this story which was based on but failed to capture the depth and reality of the Charles Nordoff-James Norman Hall novel. P.D.

ALL GROUPS MUST SPEAK

THE Legislative Committee on Rules will hold a public hearing Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the State House on the Community Property Bill sponsored by Rep. Peter J. Jordan of Revere, an outstanding Republican, and Rep. David M. Cleary of Charlestown, a leading Democrat.

THIS IS THE MOST IMPORTANT BILL OF THE YEAR.

It will enable the people of Massachusetts to save from $32,000,000 to $100,000,000 on their federal income taxes this year and every year to come.

It will keep Massachusetts money in Massachusetts, where it belongs.

It will allow the people of Massachusetts to receive the same tax concessions from the federal government that are now granted to the people of California, Arizona, Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Washington, Nevada, Idaho, Oregon and Oklahoma.

It will dignify marriage and add to its stability, just as it will discourage divorce and the abandonment of children.

It will eliminate the need of harmful levies like the unpopular Sales Tax and the increased imposts on gasoline and cigarettes.

It will solve Massachusetts' financial problems in a wholly practical and universally satisfactory manner.

IN A Community Property State—a tax reduction plan approved by the United States Supreme Court—a husband files a federal tax return on one-half of his income. His wife files on the other half.

Both escape the heavy surtaxes.

Both stay in the low tax brackets.

Both save as much as 42.7 per cent, which, in many instances, is enough to finance a child's education or to pay the real estate tax on the family home.

These substantial savings make it possible for the State to increase its income tax without imposing a serious burden on any person.

The man who pays 42.7 per cent LESS to the federal government will hardly object to paying 10 per cent MORE to the State government.

He still will be saving 32.7 per cent.

IF THE Legislature fails to make Massachusetts a Community Property State, the people of Massachusetts will be saddled with an UNNECESSARY and AVOIDABLE debt of at least $32,000,000 and probably $100,000,000. And there will be the added hardships of experimental money raising schemes which are bound to restrict prosperity and reduce employment.

This is inevitable because Massachusetts money will be siphoned away by the federal government and distributed among the other 47 states and particularly among the Community Property States.

Obviously, this is an inequity which Massachusetts cannot afford.

Certainly not when unemployment in the State is already exceeding the 1940 total and jobless compensation is costing the people more than $75,000,000 a year.

IT IS the public duty of every civic leader and responsible organization to support this vitally essential campaign to keep Massachusetts money in Massachusetts.

Many civic leaders and organizations found time to urge or oppose Governor Bradford's Sales Tax and other proposed levies.

The Community Property Bill, which is the honest and honorable way to let the people of Massachusetts keep their own money, IS A THOUSAND TIMES MORE IMPORTANT.

Persons and organizations who obstruct the Community Property Bill with SILENCE are not deceiving anyone.

They will be blamed by the people of Massachusetts as being THEIR INACTION to continue playing Santa Claus for every federal venture in the South and West.

The Chamber of Commerce, the Retail Trade Board, the Automobile Associations, the mayors' and selectmen's organizations and all other groups must not risk the accusation of failing to save the taxpayers as much as $100,000,000.

You kissed me!
My heart dropped low on your breast,
With a feeling of shelter and infinite rest.
Oh, your arms were so bold,
Heart against heart in their passionate fold.
Your glances seemed drawing
My soul through my eyes
As the sun draws the mist
From the sea to the skies.
Your lips clung to mine
Until I prayed in my bliss
They might never unclasp
From that rapturous kiss.
JOSEPHINE SLOCUM HUNT.

ABOVE WAS WRITTEN IN 1857. It would appear the young gentlemen of the period were well versed in the art of osculation. On the other hand, it is possible that the young women of that day were not kissed as frequently as the girls of today. Hence a kiss was a memorable occasion.

FAVORITE: "Make up your mind as to who is your favorite actress," writes a young woman of Boston.

"First it was Irene Dunne. Then it was Jeanette MacDonald. After that Greer Garson. Now you are raving about Pamela Brown. Still, you are faithful in your fashion. They are all red-heads."

Jeanette MacDonald

THERE are only 97 survivors of the "War Between the States" on the pension rolls. Missouri tops the list among the states with nine of these survivors. While I have so far been unable to check on it, I believe Missouri has a higher percentage of persons over a hundred years of age than any other State in the union. Why do people live so long in Missouri? Is it because of a way of living, the climate, the Missouri diet or what?

SIDELIGHTS: A Philadelphian says he has a dog who inclined of wagging his tail from right to left wags it up and down. Nine hundred and twenty-four cities in the United States now have parking meters. Average parking meter collects one hundred dollars a year. They should have them in New York city. Note "Doing What Comes Naturally" referred to as the "hit song" of the musical play, "Annie Get Your Gun." Maybe it is. But of songs in that show my favorites are "The Girl That I Married" and "I Can Do Anything You Can Do."

PASSING BY: Martin Block, King of the disc jockeys. Reported to earn $8000 a week.

By E. V. Darling

Not many song writers or band leaders earn as much. Pamela Brown. Rising young actress. She has a throaty voice. Harry Minton Peck, who made an extensive study of the lives of the great charmers of history, said the majority of these enchanting females had throaty voices. . . . Nicky Quattrociocchi, Restaurateur. He claims the long name championship of New York city. Offhand, I can't top him, but I doubt the New York long name title can be won with a 14-letter name.

BRIEFLY: Now I have a reader in Baltimore. What's so unusual about that? you ask. Well, sir, I am referring to Baltimore, Md., which has a population of 84. . . . British film fans voted "Piccadilly Incident" the most popular British-made film of 1946, with "The Seventh Veil" second. I have yet to see "The Piccadilly Incident." If it is better than "The Seventh Veil" it must be really something.

VETERANS: The veterans of World War I have much less to say about their experiences than did those of World War I when they came home. The great majority of World War II veterans say nothing about the war unless asked. And then are strongly inclined to brevity.

OVER THERE: The Rt. Hon. Edward Hugh John Neale Dalton, Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer has decided against a betting tax on horse racing. His reason for so doing should interest Americans. The Chancellor said while it was a simple thing to tax the totalizator betting at the tracks (equivalent to our pari-mutuels), that no means could be devised to tax bookmakers, and he concluded: "To tax the tote and let the bookmaker go free would be unjust and would be repudiated by all right-thinking men and women."

ASKING: Queries from clients. Q—How do you like smoking cigars in a holder? A—Not much. I still think a man who smokes a good cigar in a holder doesn't deserve to have a good cigar. Q—We are organizing a club of people who spent their honeymoon at Niagara Falls. Know any prospective members? A—Oscar Reichow, the baseball magnate, and his charming wife are eligible. Also Gregory Ratoff, the film director and the brilliant Mrs. Ratoff, professionally known as Eugenie Leontovich. Q—What is the "Triple Crown" of British racing? A—The 2000 Guineas Stake, the Derby and the St. Leger.

ASIDE: Am asked how "Circus Solly" Hoffman, the ballplayer, got his nickname. It was because of the fancy catches he made in the outfield.

THESE DAYS

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Copyright, 1947, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

IF THE COUNTRIES of Europe could settle down to work, the shortage of dollars would not be as serious as it is at this moment.

George E. Sokolsky

Even if the ordinary means of exchange remain unavailable for some time, the human mind is capable of finding means to move goods and services from areas of production to areas of need.

It is preferable and simpler to operate in private enterprise, utilizing currencies and credit balances. But it is possible to operate by barter if the goods are available, although this method of trade must produce a totalitarian state, as the one-seller, one-customer formula can only be operated by such a government.

THE PRESENT CRISIS is not due to the shortage of dollars but to the scarcity of goods. The workers of the world are not producing; management functions under political conditions which make for inefficiency and confusion.

The British government set out heartily to re-establish British trade by Socialism. The plan was to export 140 per cent of the 1938 level to be reached by the end of 1947.

It is not likely that any such goal will be reached at current production levels.

In fact, the use of both American and Canadian credits for consumer goods has weakened British industry, which should have employed every dollar of these credits for capital and durable goods in industrial replacements with the object of modernizing British productivity.

NOW THE BRITISH face a new problem. Heretofore, the countries of the sterling bloc and Great Britain's dominion creditors, as well as Egypt and Iraq, could not, by agreement, convert blocked sterling into dollars.

Even if British industry could not provide goods, countries involved in this agreement could not buy in this country.

In June, under the loan agreement, those countries can convert sterling into dollars, which means that they may use their sterling credit balances to make their purchases in the American market.

Here in New York the effects of this are already observable in the "shopping" of the representatives of many of those countries. They have come in here with all they have to turn currency into goods, because it is goods that they need.

The International Trade Organization, a body set up at Geneva to stabilize post-war foreign trade, must meet the problems created by the outbreak of Soviet Russia in remaining outside our economic world, and the monopolistic practices of empire preference, which gives Great Britain a trade advantage in the British Commonwealth of nations.

The International Trade Organization supports the concept of free and multilateral trading which both the Soviet and empire preference methods oppose.

Many in Great Britain feel that if goods can be made available there for ample export, empire preference is not, at this stage, necessary.

On the other hand, there is an American school of thought which holds that this country is exporting too much of its raw materials; that the future of the nation is being imperiled by excessive utilization of irreplaceable raw materials.

SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS once said: "Family grouping is still essential to us, not as an isolationist group but as a factor within the wider conception of world trade as a whole."

In other words, he would find a procedure that would make empire a preference and free and multilateral trading possible.

That is a bit of a task, but if Great Britain is to survive as a trading nation it is one that must be accomplished.

The British often make the point that tariffs close trade areas to them, but they rarely point also to the fact that two of their principal competitors, Germany and Japan, are out of business and that Great Britain could have absorbed their markets had she produced the goods.

In fact, in the present world shortage, any production is worth more than normal value by the operations of the law of demand and supply. It is not today as much a question of tariff concessions under, let us say, the Hull Treaties, as it is one of meeting inconvertible demands.

Only work, only production, only hard labor for many hours a week can save Great Britain.

Only the abandonment of Socialism can extricate Great Britain from her difficulties, because obviously Socialism is not producing goods.

Hollywood

George Holland

HOLLYWOOD, May 31—A very nice compliment Jose Iturbi is paying little Jane Powell. He has written an original composition called "Concerto for Jane." He's going to play it as his first encore in his concert in Europe.

When he gets back, he'll Claudeette Colbert make a picture with Ricardo Montalban called "His Only Son." Interesting thing about "His Only Son," Joe Pasternak liked it so well that after he read Myles Connolly's original story, he decided to put it on the screen.

There'll be no confusion of accents with Iturbi and Montalban, because Montalban speaks perfect English. He is of Mexican descent, and was born in Los Angeles. He is married to Loretta Young's sister, Georgianna, and MGM believes that when "Fiesta" is released, he will be hailed as another Rudolph Valentino.

WHEN I ASKED William Goetz please to verify the story I heard that Claudeette Colbert would again be on the Universal-International lot, to star in MacKinlay Kantor's "Midnight Lace," she looked so surprised I had to laugh. He acted exactly as if he hadn't heard the question. But I'm not one to be dismissed, so I insisted that Claudeette was his choice.

"Well," said Bill, "she is our choice, all right, but she hasn't signed any contract yet."

However, I'll bet Claudeette will, because "The Egg and I," her last picture for Bill, is cleaning up at the box office.

THE BLONDE, attractive Anne Jeffreys, who made a personal hit in the musical version of "Street Scene," is back in Hollywood.

She never did much in movies when she was here, but now with her Broadway experience back of her, she was immediately nabbed for "The Return of the Badman," opposite Randy Scott at RKO.

Anne may go to London with the Broadway company of "Street Scene." While here, she will file a divorce from her husband, Robert Serena, from whom she has been separated for some time.

WHAT COULD BE a pleas-anter location jaunt for Linda Christians than 10 weeks in Mexico City for "Tarzan and the Mermaid" with Johnny Weissmuller and Brenda Joyce?

Every time Linda returns from Mexico, she seems to be adorned with a few more beautiful jewels to add to a collection that is almost a coat of armor on her nose.

The Sol Lesser movie is, of course, on a loan-out from MGM where she is under contract. For the sake of her art, she will darken her hair, which should make her more of a glittering eye-fall than usual.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: Almost simultaneously with Ann Dvorak's announcement of her intention to marry Igor Dega in August as soon as her divorce from Leslie Fenton becomes final, came news about Leslie.

When he finishes "Whispering Smith," Alan Ladd's current picture at Paramount, Ann's ex will go to France for a three-month visit. It will be a very different visit from the one he made to France in 1942, when he helped lead the Nazi submarine pens at St. Nazaire, for which he received the Distinguished Service Cross from King George.

Ann was with him all during those grueling years, and she, herself, did a fine job, but unfortunately, when they returned to this country, their marriage went on the rocks.

THE MOVIE CAREER of Mrs. Cornel Wilde (Pat Knight) is beginning to wing—at last. She's signed contracts, not for one movie—but for two—first, "Roses Are Red" for Fox, and then "Rain Before Seven" for Casey Robinson at Columbia.

There was a big to-do seven or eight months ago when Pat asked for her release from 20th because she said she wouldn't have it said that her popular husband was "hypnotizing" her career. She also, very sweetly, made it clear to Cornel that she was on her own.

Well, I know he's a happy boy. He has always claimed that Pat's career would equal his own if she got the right break. Now she has two of 'em in a row.

THINGS ARE breaking just fine and dandy for Una Merkel, and I think everyone is glad. She has all the pictures she can make and she is back in her old comedy stride, and she looks grand.

She signed yesterday to play Andy Devine's wife in "The Fabulous Texan" at Republic, a comedy for Eddie Grainger.

Una and Andy will do a comedy stint and they should be very funny. This new job comes right while she is finishing "Texas Story" for Eagle-Lion. Moreover, she has a romance—a swell guy, Jack Holt.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM: Catherine Keener and Bill Gerds, the dental student, to whom she's engaged, have postponed the plans for their wedding. The reason is that Bill's father died suddenly following a heart attack in Milwaukee. Both Bill and Catherine have gone to the funeral.

Martha Kemp and Spencer Martin, who was the man in her life before she married and separated from St. Clare McKelway, were at the Beverly Tropics together. Spence has always been crazy about Martha.

Rod Cameron and Marguerite Chapman having a tete a tete dinner at the same place.

Bill and Nancy Carter expect another baby soon.

Not a very nice vacation for John Wayne. He has gone to Monterey with Mrs. Wayne, but he's on a milk diet for his ulcers.

SIX BABIES were born last week to the wives of members of Kay Kyser's orchestra, including a set of twins to the wife of Austin Peterson. To make the figure even more impressive, 19 babies have been born to the wives of members of the Kyser outfit since last June 30, and they include Miss Kimberley Kyser, Kay's own daughter. The slogan is now, "Join Kyser's Orchestra and Add to the Population."

Ray Milland is visiting his native Wales for Whitsun, this weekend.

Charlie Chaplin, Jr., and Marilyn Monroe, 20th Century-Fox young actors, are in a picture, at Frank Kerwin's Seacombers.

Ann Rutherford entertained Sophie and Adam Gimbrel at dinner last night. Sophie is here for the annual fashion show.

By the way, David May and Marilyn Maxwell have been dining and dancing together.

That's all today. See you Monday.

Listen to Louella O. Parsons Sunday night 9:15 to 9:30 E.D.T. over ABC.

Washington Scene

WASHINGTON, May 31—The Capitol of the United States is a fairly important edifice in these parts. It is certainly no exaggeration to say it dominates the city. Americans from all over come to see it—their eyes aglow with the devotion of pilgrims.

Consequently, when I climb into a taxi and say: "Drive me to the Capitol," I get somewhat irked at being delivered to the Capitol Theater, the Capitol Beauty Salon, the Capitol Boiler Works, the Capitol Ballroom—once even to the Capitol Chickery.

This is a notice to taxi jockeys that if I tell them to take me to the Capitol, I mean the Capitol. If I really wish to go anywhere else I will state so specifically.

WELL, THAT'S off my chest. It's been cankered for a long time. Now I would like to tell about the linguistic attainments of Miss Ruth Overton.

Miss Overton is the very blonde, very ravishing daughter of Sen. John H. Overton of Louisiana. The fair damsel was at a society function the other evening and was introduced to a French painter, name of Jannieux.

When his vis-a-vis (Dixon's note: "Vis-a-vis" is French for "whizz of a whizz") mentioned that she was from the Creole country, the Frenchman's face lit up.

"Then you speak French?" he cried.

Before Miss Overton could reply, the Frenchman burst into a torrent of kessikissaying, ending on a note of interrogation, to which Miss Overton replied demurely:

"Avez-vous le parapluie de ma gram'mere?"

The Frenchman looked puzzled. Then, in English, he said:

"Possibly I did not understand correctly. What was it you said?"

"I said: 'Do you have my grandmother's umbrella?'" explained Miss Overton. "It is the only sentence in French I know."

REP. GEORGE J. BATES of Massachusetts has been trying to get more taxes for the District of Columbia. So he drew up a bill designed to accomplish same.

A few hours later reporters found him, harassed and lost-looking, wandering through the mazes of the Capitol. Very plainly, Mr. Bates asked:

"How is the name of heaven do you go about introducing a bill?"

It turned out that Rep. Bates wasn't kidding. He has been in Congress for 10 years but this is the first bill he ever tried to introduce. He explained he had sponsored many measures, but had always prevailed upon another congressman to do the actual introducing.

AT THE WEDDING of his daughter, Marilyn, the other day, Sen. Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska was very much in evidence in the receiving line. He kept holding up the parade to exchange political opinions with male guests.

The congestion finally became serious. Whereupon his wife murmured vexedly:

"Father is certainly the bottleneck at this reception!"

QUITE A CONGRESSIONAL gathering was assembled to see Hildegard the other evening. Among the cash customers were Sen. C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois; Styles Bridges of New Hampshire; and J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island.

The chaotico had a young Army colonel up on the stage.

"I see you're a colonel," she cooed. "How much longer do

Boston After-Dark

FRIENDS SAY that the Goodales are moving to the Middle West . . . Counsel and friends of Charles Russell Goodale are cautioning against acceptance of offers for the young man's appearance in public . . . They argue that the young man will incur widespread resentment if he attempts to cash in on the notoriety attendant upon his trial . . . Atty. Herbert Callahan, who defended the Onset Navy veteran so brilliantly, is reported as being opposed to the move of Sen. Charles G. Miles of Brockton in introducing a bill at this time which would make the State recompense Goodale at the rate of $50 a day for the time he spent in jail and on trial . . . Although the projected legislation is general, and does not specify Goodale, the fact that Sen. Miles hails from the district where the McGurk murder was committed, and the timing of the senator's proposed legislative maneuver so that it would be introduced almost before the ink had dried on headlines proclaiming Goodale's acquittal, are elements which combine to make it appear that the measure was inspired by the widely-publicized Goodale case . . . If Sen. Miles does decide on Monday to go ahead with his bill, the recompensation act would be classified as "emergency legislation."

TRAINER HARRY BEDWELL'S fest of winning both future races at Suffolk Downs on Memorial Day with Prognosis and Hammer-Lock came in contradiction to the sports-page cliché "Youth Must Be Served" . . . Nearly 40 years ago, in the year 1909 to 1911, inclusive, Bedwell was the leading trainer in America.

JOHN FOX AND JAMES VAHEY, the attorneys, returned from Pittsburgh with a story of a startling experience in the Smoky City . . . Friends had gotten them guest privileges at a Pittsburgh club which ranked in exclusiveness with the Union League or Somerset . . . As they were packing to leave, the chambermaid made her entrance . . . "Which one of you gentlemen slept in that bed?" she demanded . . . Atty. Fox admitted that he had been the occupant of the designated bed . . . "You're sure a lucky man," said she, at last. "You can tell your friends that you slept in the bed that Bing Crosby slept in."

The climax to the story, however, is an experience which happened to Mr. Vahey . . . A dreamer neither awake or asleep as a rule, Vahey awoke in Pittsburgh . . . "Just three days," replied the warrior.

"Oh, how splendid!" trilled Hildegard. "And then you become a civilian?"

"No," said the officer, sadly. "Then I become a major."

Hildegard was puzzled for a moment. Then she said: "But why in the world is that?"

"I think," replied the officer, "you'd better ask these senators."

A SENATORIAL acquaintance of mine was complaining that he was getting tired of seeing pictures of himself shaking hands with people he did not know from Adam. I asked why he posed with them.

"I don't volunteer," he said, "but when they are a camera aimed at you, they rush up and give you the lobbyist's handshake."

This senator said it is impossible to break loose from the lobbyist's handshake without wrestling tactics. He explained how it works—just try it sometime if you really wish to imprison someone.

Get the victim's right hand firmly clasped in your own. Then, with your left hand, grab him hard by the right elbow . . . and hang on!

burgh with a vivid dream fresh in his mind . . . He had slept in the bed in which Bing Crosby had NOT slept in, so there is little likelihood that the King's one-time connection with such slow horses had anything to do with inspiring the dream . . . The Vahey dream had him winning a daily double on the numbers 6 and 1, and the pay-off was enormous.

After getting off the train at Back Bay, Messrs. Vahey and Fox drove to the Dighton dog track, where they had a business appointment . . . They arrived just as the No. 6 dog won the first race . . . No. 1 won the second race completing the Vahey dream double . . . Having missed the first winner of the double, James "naturally" did not bet on the second end . . . We put quotation marks around the word "naturally" because the quotation is direct from Atty. Vahey . . . The 6-1 daily double would have returned about $1300 if Jim had been able to bet as he intended . . . But that's not all . . . James felt sure that the spell of the dream would hold over a day. So he bet the combination 6 and 1 at Suffolk yesterday . . . Valinda Punch, No. 6, won the first race . . . No. 1 in the second, Garden Pot, assumed the lead in the home stretch . . . But Calvert slipped in on the rail and won by half a length.

Broadway

By Dorothy Kilgallen

Copyright, 1947, King Features Synd., Inc. NEW YORK, May 31—Orana Atkinson, a witty and perceptive member of Broadway's "first night" set, has written a book about her 10 months in Moscow, called "Over at Uncle Joe's," which probably will be read with equal relish by natives of Lindy's and ladies sipping lemonade in Ohio hammocks, because it is as informative as it is amusing.

Dorothy Kilgallen as a racing sheet and wital as gay and humorous as the book you always hope the girl in the lending library will give you on an August afternoon. To write a frolicsome volume about Russia would seem offhand to be a fairly impossible task, but Mrs. Atkinson has done it, and the movie makers could do worse than corral it for a good one on August afternoon. Mrs. Atkinson does not pretend she got behind the Iron Curtain, but she certainly got as close to it as she could, and wherever she found holes in it she peered through with the unabashed curiosity of a lady trying to get a line on the new neighbors. You just can't help but enjoy looking over her shoulder.

ON THE RUSSIAN VIEWPOINT: "When I got to Moscow and found myself surrounded by people who knew almost nothing about America and who blandly assumed that Russia was the greatest country in the world, I felt as Abre must have felt when she stepped through the looking glass. The Russians assume quite simply that Russia won the war—the war against Germany and the war against Japan. They assume that Russia will dictate the peace, and find that assumption completely reasonable. They believe that the whole world of science, art, agriculture, philosophy and literature should be led and guided by Russia, since she already is pre-eminent in all these fields."

New Fashions in Jewelry

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Beauty and Fashion Editor

IT IS NOT PRICE but placing of jewelry that gives you the precious look this season. Your precious or semi-precious jewels are only important in relation to the expressed ingenuity of your accessorizing prowess. This season you think before you add jewelry to your ensemble . . . think of new ways to make its presentation outstanding.

Time was when a clip or a pin was slapped somewhere on a dress without any rhyme or reason for its helter-skelter placement . . . when a necklace was a simple one-strand affair to camouflage tell-tale throat slankness . . . and a bracelet was nothing more than a continuity of linked stones dangling from the wrist.

Today jewelry for summer sunshine and moonlight has a fashion purpose . . . a definite affinity for certain types of warm-weather garb. It personalizes the wearer and her clothes . . . supplies the necessary verve to a costume . . . and spikes an otherwise simple outfit.

ADD FLOWER CLIPS

For summer in town, for instance . . . if you wear a tailored cotton of pink and black flowered print . . . add some flower clips to a band of black ribbon criss-crossed at the throat line . . . their motif extending the print of the dress for a costume look.

Very cool and fresh for summer is the golden brown shimmering frock with colorful jewels and a flower hat as accent. For fetching attraction at the wrist . . . when arms are exposed below the short sleeves . . . there are the very smart and popular gold link bracelets with disc-clover and heart charms of gold to catch a willing eye.

If you have a white-striped cashmere dress WITH the added attraction of a stole . . . the latest beach ensemble . . . dress it up with some effective summer silver jewelry . . . such as four bangle bracelets in basket pattern and a fifth with many small hearts of different design pointed up with one large heart. Group some open-heart pins at the top of the bodice and wear matching earrings.

If you really want to look as "pretty as a picture" because you're the ingenue type with comely face and youthful swiftness . . . capture the cameo's loveliness in a pin of the same description but wear it pinned to a narrow throat band for an accent on youth. And also take a pin from the same period like the pictured gold bow pin . . . and pin it to a black velvet wristband.

SCARF PINS ARE NEW

Scarfs are smart this season and scarf pins are new. Particularly feminine and fashion nows are lace scarfs to be worn mantilla-style over the head . . . their frothy loveliness dramatized with companion brilliants pinned at the hair line and again at the low-cut bodice line to hold the scarf drape in place. Or for the tied scarf to accent the white flannel suit and tailored hat . . . use a brilliant-shaped pin to hold the knot in place and call attention to the neck accessory.

Don't make a bubble of your bubble. Exercise judicious fashion wisdom in making the most of beautifully-designed jewelry this summer . . . so that the sun and the moonlight will play on their strategic placement for a more effective appearance.

These new ways to make effective use of your jewelry are sponsored by the Jewelry Industry Council who this summer urge that you wear jewelry with an art with a flare.

ALWAYS FLATTERING . . . pearls this summer must be worn in this new way to be of the fashion moment. Eight strands make a wide collar to wear with a bare shouldered evening gown of gray . . . and a pale pink chiffon scarf . . . a triumph in color fantasy. A new accent for the pearl collar is a gold circle clip . . . clipped to the strand . . . and matching earrings for a new color combine in jewelry.

Individual Salads

By MARTHA LEE, Household Editor

FOR LUNCHEONS, dinners, and bridge parties, salads are a feature attraction. Tender crisp greens, succulent fruits and well-seasoned vegetable combinations—how we love them!

Probably because tossing salad in a capacious bowl is so easy, we serve that kind most often. But don't ever neglect individual salads.

Have you ever stopped to consider all the little things that make individual salads a success? Selecting plates large enough to frame the salad, and seeing that the plates are well chilled are vital. And if you like to make your salads ahead of time, seeing that there is room in the refrigerator to keep them crisp and fresh until serving time is essential, too.

There are individual salads galore, all the way from aspic to fruit combinations.

BANANA LUNCHEON SALAD

3 bananas $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sliced pecans or walnuts
Lettuce $\frac{1}{2}$ cup mayonnaise

Peel bananas just before salad is to be served. Slice in halves lengthwise. Arrange with lettuce on individual plates, garnish with mayonnaise, and sprinkle with sliced nut meats.

APPLE AND CELERY SALAD

$\frac{1}{2}$ cups diced apples $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sliced pecans or walnuts
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup mayonnaise

Mix apples with mayonnaise. Fold in celery and nut meats. Serve in lettuce cups. Pass extra mayonnaise. Makes 6 servings.

PEAR AND PEANUT SALAD

1 cup cream cheese 8 pear halves
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup chopped peanuts French dressing

Shape cream cheese into 8 balls and roll in peanuts. Place 2 pear halves on bed of lettuce. Drop peanut crusted cheese ball in hollow of each. Serve with French dressing. Four servings.

A classic salad which knows no season and

AN EYE for the beauty of her jewels has this model (pictured at top above), who obviously has discovered new ways of wearing brilliants to give a personal touch to her ensemble. For her tailored cotton suit of pink and black flowered print . . . she wears flower clips pinned on a band of black ribbon. The gold-filled clips are worked to give the new, light open look with a cluster of pink stones in the center. The earrings match.

PRETTY as a picture and ready for . . . well, dancing under the moon and stars for a summer evening of rapturous enjoyment. The white lace ruffles on the square-cut neckline are perfect background for the cameo pendant pink. Also borrowed from the same period are the gold bow pin . . . worn on a black velvet wristband . . . and the small bow earrings.

never becomes outdated is a fruit and cottage cheese salad. Varieties of fruit which are used with cottage cheese change with the season and the ways in which they may be combined also change. One of the newest and truly delicious ways of serving this popular duo is as a dressing. Put cottage cheese through a sieve and combine with apricot whole fruit nectar. Season to taste with lemon juice, salt, a few drops of tabasco sauce and a bit of mustard. Then pass it separately at the table when there is to be a fruit salad or the menu.

I DROWN IN RIVER

SHARON, Pa., May 31 (INS)—Three persons were drowned and a fourth narrowly escaped today when a motorboat capsized in the rain swollen waters of the Shenango river near Sharpsburg.

20 Spahn Limp To His Eighth Straight Win

By AUSTEN LAKE

THERE WERE MOMENTS during the sunny holiday, while the Braves gave the Dodgers a double helping of distress, when young Master Warren Spahn's serial of eight straight victories seemed about to be sundered, severed and rent. But he limped to a 6-3 decision by courtesy of some solid belting by Messrs. Holmes, Hopp, Elliott and Rowell in the seventh.

I don't think Warren would call that one up to his Phi Beta Kappa standard. But he won it and now some of our statistical-minded fans are dusting off the mouldering record of old Rube Marquard when he won 19 straight for the Giants in 1912, which Rube stoutly claims was actually 20. Eight from 19 leaves 11 and certainly it would be most optimistic to think that far ahead.

Earl's Two-Run Bobble

IT PAINS ME TO SAY that the temporary villain in Spahn's plot was none other than Earl Torgeson, the darling of the Boston press, who flubbed a silly little pop fly in the second inning which your little sister Minnie could have caught in her pinafore. It was one of those matters like goofing a two-inch putt or muffing a perfect pass in the end zone, both of which I have done in my own day, and felt very sheepish about. But it cost Spahn two unearned runs and might have been his ball game.

This occurred after Master Spahn had demonstrated a difficult mathematical theorem in the first inning in which he showed how to issue three bases on balls and a two-base hit without allowing any runs. That's one the Odditorium, but he did it by catching Jackie Robinson off first base with his arches down, the result of Spahn's weird Minsky leg-motion in which he kicks high and throws to first base while looking at the plate. It's an optical illusion which embarrassed Jackie before several thousand of his colored fellow-ship who came to gloat over his every action. That enabled Spahn to sandwich in a two-bagger between two more bases on balls and escape unscathed.

Let's be charged with race prejudice in appraising Robinson's play, I will testify that I like Jackie as a personality and a character, and in some respects as a ball player, though I regret that I cannot endorse him, at this inst., as first baseman, about which, at times he borders on the crude. As on Hopp's hard whistler in the seventh which skimmed between his legs and set up a two-run advantage on Bob Elliott's single.

It was a sock that a more adept craftsman would have blocked for the putout, or a mitt-skilled baseman would have snagged for the double-killing, thus retired the side scoreless. But before the spasm ended four Braves had made lovely plopping sounds with their feet on home plate. So there was your ball game.

I do not wish to be harsh with Jackie, who is doing much to democratize the game on the free American principle of equal opportunity for all. But my job is to analyze athletic action regardless of color, creed or affiliation, though I hasten to say I was seeing him play for the first time and probably on one of his sluggish days. Also, having been educated as a second baseman where he has greater opportunity to examine whiskery drives and bad hops, he is going through an adjustment period and may achieve the required flourish before the end of summer—a wish that I sincerely give him.

Mind Over Matter

BUT AT THE MOMENT JACKIE seems confused over what to do about his feet around the base, and once he took a throw at the back of the bag, for no good reason, and at the risk of having the Braves' runner knock him kicking—which fortunately did not happen. Yet, what Jackie lacks in polish he supplies with pure muscular effort, once spilling himself like he was diving off tackle for the required yardage in an effort to break up a double play—which he did.

And once in the ninth he beat out a bunt by sheer friction of his feet and a spraddled, wide knee-action that must have made him a heavy insurance hazard to the health of opposing tacklers when he played football at UCLA. That kind of piston action could knock a tackler permanently silly and I congratulate myself that I did not have to stop that guy in my rubbery day in college sport.

But back to Spahn! Recently, while sorting his mail in the Braves' clubhouse, Billy Southworth was giving a dissertation on pitching control. "Control is nine-tenths mental," said Billy. "It's the power to concentrate the focal beam of attention. The rest is coordination—the messages which fly between eye, mind and muscle."

So Spahn was having his troubles when he walked Reese to open the ninth inning and threw three straight balls to Miksis, pinch hitting for Casey. Southworth trotted out of the cave and stood clapping his chin at Warren for a few moments. What he said was between himself and the pitcher, but it was obviously papa-talk concerning the ninth inning jitters, a common affliction with the best of pitchers. Then Spahn pitched three straight strikes, all called. It was what Southworth would call a demonstration of mind over matter.

2d Driver Blasts Rose Win, Says He Was Told to Go Slow

INDIANAPOLIS, May 31 (AP)—Bill Holland of Bridgeport, Ct., who finished 32 seconds behind his teammate, Mauri Rose of Chicago, winner of the Memorial Day 500-mile automobile classic, said today "it's the loudest deal I ever got."

Holland, who led until the last few laps, got an "Ezy" signal from his pit crew and Rose passed him. Both drove identical new four-cylinder cars owned by Lou Moore of Ventura, Cal.

"The first time I knew I didn't win the race was when I pulled into the pits and heard the man on the loud speaker say, 'Holland second,'" the 39-year-old veteran of the dirt tracks said.

"I asked the men in my pit why they didn't tell me," he went on, "and they said, 'Moore wouldn't let us.'"

Moore, who built the Blue Crown spark plug specials, told a reporter:

"I had no preference. I gave both drivers the ezy signal. There are a lot of rumors going around I know. I'm sorry if there was any misunderstanding. Bill has a wonderful future."

Holland, who was competing in his first "500," gave his side of the story:

"All I was getting was the ezy signal. I thought I had a lap on Rose. I was running half-throttle when Rose went by. I waved to him. I guess I waved $10,000 to him. (That is the difference between first and second prize.)"

"I was going into the turns at 90 miles an hour after I got the ezy signal. I thought I had it in the bag. I would have won the race by a lap and a half. The next time I'll have my own money in the car."

Rose, going into the winner's pen, said he won only because Holland was slowed by engine trouble at the end. But Moore said there was no engine trouble—that he meant to signal both cars to take it easy because they were well ahead of the field and he wanted them to finish.

The race, second fastest since the holiday event was inaugurated in 1911, was marred by the death of William (Shorty) Cantlon, veteran Indianapolis driver who finished second to Billy Arnold in 1930. Cantlon, 43-year-old bachelor and used car dealer, smacked the wall coming out of the southwest turn, trying to avoid a mixup that occurred when Holland skidded into the grass along the inside of the track.

Cantlon was the only driver injured in a series of skids and collisions and his death was the first at the Speedway since Floyd Roberts was killed in 1939.

Only 12 cars of the 30 starters were still running at the end. Rose's winning speed was 116.338 miles an hour, second only to the late Floyd Roberts' 117.2 in 1938.

Rose finished 32 seconds ahead of Holland in winning his second Memorial Day victory. He was co-winner with Floyd Davis in 1941.

Braves Thrill Holiday Throng With Two Brilliant Victories

By FRED HOEY

A chunky bit of Vermont granite, 5-7 tall and weighing 155 pounds, went to the hill today for the rampaging Braves in an effort to make a clean sweep of the Brooklyn series. It was Walter Lanfranco of Barre, Vt., who pitched the outcome of today's game, the fighting Braves were the talk of the baseball world after kayaking the Dodgers twice on the holiday.

The Braves currently are in a two-way tie for second place with the Cubs and only one game away from the leading Giants.

The Dodgers, by dropping both holiday games to the Tribe, plunged to fourth, a full game behind Southworth's men.

Meanwhile, New England fans were awaiting with keen interest the outcome of the two arc light games tonight featuring Pittsburgh at New York and the Cubs at Philadelphia. If the Giants lose, the Braves move into a top place tie with them, but if the Cubs also win there'll be a three-way tie for the pacing role.

Sometimes it has been the Braves' misfortune to falter badly before a huge crowd, but yesterday before 30,535 they delivered handsomely, sweeping the Dodgers twice, 6-3 and 3-0, thanks to fine pitching of Warren Spahn and Red Barrett.

Earl Torgeson, the Braves' colorful first sacker, equalled a big league record when he failed to have a put out at first in the first game, although he did muffle an easy pop fly for an error. The modern record was set by Bud Clancy of the White Sox in 1930 and equalled again by Ripper Col-

Wife of Ex-H. C. Star Gets 'Biggest Thrill' As He Wins Amateur

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 31 (AP)—Mrs. Willie Turnesa walked into the White Plains Reporter-Dispatch building today just as the teletype machines brought the news of her husband's victory in the British amateur golf tournament.

Mrs. Turnesa said she had "No idea the match would be ending now."

"It is the biggest thrill of my life," she said, "even bigger than the thrill I got in 1938 when as Willie's sweetheart I watched him win the U. S. amateur at Oakmont."

She was accompanied by her 2½-year-old son, Charles. The Turnesa's 4-year-old daughter, Anne, was too busy playing at home to accompany her mother on the shopping trip.

Willie's brothers, five of whom are golf professionals, likely will gather at the home of their father, Mike Turnesa at Elmsford, N. Y., for an impromptu celebration tomorrow. The said new champion is one of seven sons and all are expected except Joe who is in England with Willie.

Prior to today's 3 and 2 verdict over Dick Chapman of Pinehurst, N. C., for the British title, Willie's biggest triumph was in the 1938 U. S. Amateur.

He was a semifinalist in that same meet in 1934, and reached the fifth round in the 1935 event. In 1936 as a student at Holy Cross, he reached the semifinal round of the Intercollegiate tourney.

He put the New York state amateur cup beside the U. S. trophy in 1938 and in 1942 made a brief sortie into Florida where he won the Florida open and finished third in the Miami open.

After a three-year career as a Naval lieutenant during the war he returned to competition last summer but the best he could do was to tie for the title in a Metropolitan pro-amateur event.

Quiet and soft-spoken, probably the best indication of Willie's character came during his present tour of England. He finished earlier than Chapman in the semifinals but instead of dashing for the clubhouse to get out of the rain he ambled by the soggy course to hold the umbrella over Chapman as he finished his round.

During the Walker Cup matches, when it looked as if the British forces might tie the U. S. invaders, he remarked at the halfway point "Good, I've got six brothers at home, five of them pros, and if I don't win this match I'll never be able to live edown."

Then he went out to subdue Cecil Ewing of Ireland, 6 and 5, to help insure the return of the Walker Cup to the United States.

Brother Joe, who was second to Bobby Jones in the 1926 U. S. open, trudged around the soggy Carnoustie course with Willie, primarily to help the new champion keep his wood and long iron shots low—virtually the only fault in Willie's array of golf shots.

Of the five brothers who are professionals, Mike is at the Knollwood Country Club, which is Willie's home course; Phil and Douglas are at Elmwood and Frank and Jim at the Metropolis, all in the greater New York area. The non-golfing brother is Jack.

In his non-golfing hours, Willie is a manufacturer's representative. He is 33 years old.

Willie Turnesa Tops Chapman To Win British Amateur Title

By THOMAS C. WATSON

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland, May 31 (INS)—Willie Turnesa defeated Dick Chapman by 3 and 2 today to win the British amateur golf championship in the first all-American final ever played in the ancient event which was started in 1886. A crowd of some 3000 sad-eyed Scots and other fans from the British Isles slashed and slipped through mud left by forenoon thunderstorms to see the 36-hole final that resulted in one of the most coveted sports crowns moving across the sea.

The fact that an American victory was assured yesterday when Turnesa and Chapman eliminated the last of the Scots to bring about this unprecedented clash between two United States invaders did not lessen the gloom evident around old Carnoustie in today's gloaming.

Turnesa, dapper, dark-haired young business executive from White Plains, N. Y., is one of the famed golfing Turnesa brothers, and formerly starred as a golfer at Holy Cross College. Like a true champion he won in a dogged come-from-behind tussle with his Walker Cup teammate from Pinehurst, N. C.

Turnesa was 5 down at the forenoon turn, all square at the end of the first 18, 1 up for the first time when he won the 27th and went on from there to score the sixth victory by a native-born American in the event revered by all the Scots, old and young.

As Turnesa joined Jess Sweetser, Bobby Jones, Lawson Little, twice a winner, and Charlie Yates as winner of the trophy he all but made America the golfing capital of the British Empire.

Sam Snead holds the British Open crown and only last week Turnesa regained the Walker Cup which England had held since before the war.

The 33-year-old former naval lieutenant won from his fellow-American and the United States amateur titleholder of 1940 by bringing to bear all the golf learned from his famed brothers who for years made headlines.

He also brought into repeated play the shot he confesses is his favorite—the deft and intricate slash dead for the pin out of a trap.

Many of these on the afternoon round broke the back and finally the spirit of Chapman who saw his seemingly insurmountable forenoon lead dwindle to nothing when Turnesa began to go.

The Scots had made Turnesa a slight favorite, but were glumly admitting they had picked the wrong man when Chapman ran up his five-hole lead on the first nine.

At this juncture, when all seemed lost for the little New Yorker, he reeled off five straight winning holes, starting at the 10th, and went on from there to win.

Two Opening Day Features At Narragansett on Monday

NARRAGANSETT PARK, R. I., May 31—Final touches were put on the spacious race track here today as the maintenance staff completed work for the opening of the summer meeting on Monday with an eight-race card. The meeting runs through July 5, and with the vacation season at hand Judge James Duley, track head, expects a banner campaign.

Opening day card arranged by Ty Shea, racing secretary, includes two features, the $5000 Inaugural for three-year-olds and up, a sprint of five and one half furlongs, and a route affair, the New London. The latter is over a mile and a sixteenth and is a $4000 test for four-year-olds and up.

Post time at Gansett will be 2:15 and a new schedule of special trains and buses has been arranged to get the throngs to the track in plenty of time for the 2:00 p. m. daily double closing.

New and improved Puett starting Gansett this season has a huge gate with many improvements over the old model.

This gate was rolled from the manufacturing plant in New Jersey over the road to Gansett, a feat that required the aid of state and local police in each sector traversed, due to the size of the gate.

While many of the stables which have campaigned at Suffolk will continue at Gansett, there are a number of new strings here from New York, Maryland and other points to lend fresh interest to the racing.

Tebbetts' Catching Sox Only Bright Spot

By HERB FINNEGAN

WASHINGTON, May 31—Maybe the A's were right when they predicted as the Red Sox left Philadelphia: "You won't win after you leave here." The Sox looked like semi-pros as they dropped both ends of the Memorial Day doubleheader to the Senators (13-6, 5-3), and as they prepared to fly (all except 10) to Chicago today they had dropped to fourth place.

Red Sox Need Mele, Moses In Lineup

WASHINGTON, May 31—What's the matter with the Red Sox? Look first at the batting averages: Williams .294, York .222, DiMaggio .240, Pesky .262, Doerr .245, Russell .147, Gutierrez .104. . . Sox need Mele (.302) and Moses (.380) in the lineup at the same time. They also need Pellagrin's fielding. . . They won't go anywhere with the pitching they're getting, to be sure. Ferriss can't carry the load alone. Hughson? . . . "Not so fast as he used to be," said Bluege. Hughson got himself in a deep hole when he threw his home run ball to Stan Spence in the first inning. It was the eighth homer made off him this season, all eight coming in his last 21 innings. This was particularly surprising against the Senators because he beat them six times without reply last year, also beat the A's six times. Thus 12 of his 20 victories were against two of the weakest 1946 clubs.

But he might have done all right against Washington if it hadn't been for third baseman Russell. In the first inning, Lewis raced to third on Grace's single to DiMaggio. It was a poor throw (everybody's been running to third on Dom of late) but Russell could have made the tag. If he had done so, Vernon's fly would have ended the inning. Those things bother the Texan (they don't ruffle Ferriss) and then he threw his home run ball to Spence. Three runs in the hole at the start. . . In the fourth he walked Spence with one out. Priddy doubled to Russell, and with a double play in front of him that would have ended the inning, Russell kicked the ball. So Tex got mad again, tried to blow the ball by the hitters, and the Senators got four more runs. Curtains.

Williams?—Finally singled after going hitless in 11 at-bats, but he was game enough to play on a badly bruised leg. He played both halves, might just as well have "stood" in bed. In the first inning, first game, Pieretti fanned him with two on while Pesky was out stealing third. In the fifth inning, two on, again, Williams the tying run (homer would have equalled the score) Hudson relieved Pieretti and fanned him. In the fourth inning, he bobbed Christman's single but if Russell had been covering third as he should have been, Williams could have thrown out Priddy.

Doerr complained of a bad back and defaulted for the second day in a row. He's low, too, for a leader of men. Schreiber was hit below the heart by a DiMaggio drive in batting practice, and had to recline for an hour. It could be serious. . . Dobson pitched well in the nightcap after walking the first two men to face him. "The mound is low," said Dobson, "much lower than any other in the league." He gave only three hits in six innings, and Cronin mystified the press when he lifted him for pinch hitter Culberson with two out and nobody on base. Sox were trailing by only one run at the time. . .

All the world seems dark and dreary everywhere they roam. They'll never repeat their 1946 pennant victory (Bucky Harris and Ossie Bluege say so) with Hughson out of line and Harris scratched.

"Worst looking club to visit us this year," said Washingtonians. "Only resemblance to the 1946 Sox is the uniforms."

There is one difference, one notable difference. That is in catching.

The Sox have found a gem in Birdie Tebbetts of Nashua, N. H., and it is pity they didn't have him 10 years ago.

That may not have a metallic ring because Detroit has been winning with Hal Wagner while the Sox have been losing with Tebbetts. But things would be a whole lot worse if Tebbetts were not around.

Fenway fans will idolize him. He's the closest approach to Gabby Hartnett Boston has seen since Gabby's hey-day. He's a scrapper. He's a thrower. He's a snail (he stole 13 bases). Johnson and Dorish are lavish in their praise of him. He takes charge. He got fine out of the game in Philadelphia right away and Johnson went on to win it. "He knew in an instant when I lost my stuff," said Fine.

Here are a few of the things Tebbetts has done since joining the Sox: Picked Page off second, McQuinn off first in the New York series. Pulled a delayed steal against the A's, something the Sox never do. It was only the fourth base stolen by the Sox this year, (incredible but correct).

Hit a double against the A's that missed being a homer by only two feet after promising Dorish he'd rip one. Started the Sox off on their one big inning against Washington with a two run double that would have been a triple if his "wheels" weren't bad.

He injured his knee sliding into home against the A's. He had back packs on it all the way to Washington. He had ice packs on it all the holiday morning.

"You're out," said Trainer Win Green. "I'm in," said Tebbetts. "I was hired for steady employment."

(Sox have been kidding Tebbetts so much about Hal Wagner's chronic indisposition he'd play on crutches but he doesn't need any prodding.)

"First time in my life I've had anything but a finger injury," he said. "I'll catch one game, we have Saturday off, and I'll be myself again Sunday."

After he's been around a while he'll put a charge into the Sox if he has to lick every guy on the club to do it.

He's managerial timber, this Tebbetts. And Cronin, anxious to get acquainted with his growing family and move into the front office, knew it when he brought him here.
